[Redacted]

Dear [Redacted]

Thank you very much for the material attached to your letter of 4 September. Some of our people were very glad to see it and we have placed these studies in our files.

The two studies [Redacted] which you say were prepared by [Redacted] also appear to be of interest to us and if you could arrange to loan them to me for a short period, we would greatly appreciate your cooperation.

In accordance with my conversation with [Redacted] the other day, I have needed certain of our people in order to expedite their decision to proceed with your [Redacted] project. Unfortunately, I can't give you any definite answer at this moment, but will not fail to let you know as soon as the result of their decision is made known to me.

With best personal regards,

Most sincerely,

Michael G. Corson
